Digital Health Hubs work to support people to have greater access to health and care services digitally, access to wider support and tools to improve self-management, increased digital skills, literacy and confidence and improved health and wellbeing.

How do health apps work
Health Management Apps

These apps typically offer general health management tools like medication trackers and reminders, as well as disease-specific functions like blood glucose tracking for people with diabetes or reporting bleeding events for people with hemophilia

What is a health tracking app

A health tracker is an electronic application used to record and manage healthy living statistics and measure progress, but what does it really mean? A health tracker is a way to take all your data and put it together to form a meaningful picture of your overall lifestyle, be it healthy or not so
